GRASSHOPPERS, LEAFHOPPERS BECOMING MORE WIDESPREAD

Grasshoppers and potato leafhoppers, although not yet serious, seem to be becoming more numerous in Virginia's alfalfa fields.

Arthur Morris, associate etomologist at VPI, says there are heavy infestations of grasshoppers in some clover fields and serious damage is certain.

European corn borer eggs have hatched in southwest Virginia and some fields will have a lower yield come harvest time because of the tunneling action of the larvae.

Other insect highlights as reported by agricultural workers throughout the state and compiled by Morris:

Leaf miners are causing heavy damage to corn in parts of south-central Virginia.

Tobacco hornworms and budworms are increasing in southwestern Virginia, but there's no cause for alarm yet.

Fruit insect activity is increasing, although no serious damage has been reported to date.

Some species of forest and shade trees are being threatened, or heavily damaged, in some areas of the state. The smaller European elm bark beetles and fall canker worms are currently the most troublesome pests.

Japanese beetle infestations continue heavy and widespread in many areas. A variety of plants are being affected.

Home gardeners throughout Virginia are being plagued with thrips on onions.

Leo Hendrick Baekeland invented bakelite.

Thomas Alva Editorn patented more than 11,000 inventions.

Newest Attraction at Park

estate of the late S. L. Ferguson, and was purchased from Mrs. Adelia Ferguson in 1937 to be included in the National Park Service Restoration.

Accompanying this article is a picture of the property as it appeared in 1865. The modern restoration will eventually be carried on to include all of the outbuildings and to restore it to perfect 1865. This is printed No. 220 in the famous Brady Collection of the Library of Congress.

There were two additions on the main structure. The central portion of the main structure was made entirely of brick, and this is the part still standing and recently restored and is now known as the Clover Hill Tavern Museum. The larger of the two additions stood to the left and was frame. The smaller addition to the right was gabled facing differently, and both had weather-boarding walls and no front porch.

Frankly, the 1865 picture showed that the Clover Hill Tavern was in a rather "run-down" condition. But many other places, many other homes, many other institutions had "run-down" in Dixie by April 9 1865, and the one wholesome fact to come out of the struggle of 1861-65 is that these shrines will not be forgotten and the history of such places as Clover Hill Tavern will be preserved in modern America.

How was it to spend a night at Clover Hill Tavern on the fabulous stage coach line from Lynchburg to Richmond in Ante-Bellum days? Who knows? But the Old Tavern is still there . . . its walls silent but restored and you can go down there today or tomorrow and catch the spirit . . . as many other Americans, known as "tourists," are doing every day.

NEXT MONTH BUSY TIME FOR FARMERS

Complaint Against Motor Boats

M. N. Levine, president of the Prince William County chapter of the Izaak Walton League, has registered to the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries a protest against the operation of heavy outboard and inboard motor boats on Lake Jackson in that county.

Levine says that, besides danger to life, it is becoming very disturbing to fishing because of heavy wave action against the shores of this narrow body of water.

Mr. Levine has been informed that the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries does not have authority to remove outboard and other types of motor boats and that in all probability it would take an act of the General Assembly.

YIELDS OF CREEPING ALFALFA VARIETIES LOWER THAN RECOMMENDED TYPES

Creeping alfalfa varieties, which have spurred many questions from farmers the past few years, can be expected to yield 25 to 50 percent lower than recommended varieties in Virginia.

This is indicated by Virginia tests and reports from other states. VPI agronomists say: "In addition to having low yields, these varieties are very susceptible to leaf spot and other diseases common to the eastern part of the United States. It is hard in most cases to maintain a satisfactory stand under Virginia's humid conditions, and there is no indication to date in the east that creeping alfalfa is any more suitable for grazing than standard varieties."

Two creeping alfalfa varieties, Nomad and Rhizoma, have received the most attention publicity-wise, and seed of each is available. Both were developed in the Pacific Northwest (Oregon and Canada) in semi-arid areas where natural fertility and lime conditions are most favorable for alfalfa without the addition of lime and potash as fertilizer.
